The History of Thanksgiving

Most cultures around the world have some form of prayers of thanks and thanksgiving ceremonies.

However, America's Thanksgiving history is rooted in English traditions dating from the Protestant Reformation and the reign of Henry VIII in reaction to the large number of religious holidays on the Catholic calendar. After breaking from the Catholic Church, Henry VIII wanted to create holidays that were distinct for Protestant Britons to celebrate.

In the United States, the modern Thanksgiving holiday tradition is traced to a 1621 celebration at Plymouth Colony. A good harvest that year prompted the Pilgrims to hold a feast in the tradition of their English roots. The 3-day feast took place sometime between September 21 and November 11, 1621. The Pilgrims were joined by about 90 of the local Wampanoag tribe, including Chief Massasoit, in celebration. They ate fowl and deer and most likely also ate berries, fish, clams, plums, and boiled pumpkin.

The holiday did not become an annual tradition right away, however and it wasn't until October 1777 that all 13 colonies celebrated a day of thanksgiving. As President of the United States, George Washington proclaimed the first nation-wide Thanksgiving celebration in America marking November 26, 1789, "as a day of public thanksgiving and prayer to be observed by acknowledging with grateful hearts the many and signal favours of Almighty God."

It was not until President Abraham Lincoln issued a Thanksgiving Proclamation in October 1863 that it became a true national holiday. With the country torn in half from Civil War, Lincoln was searching for a way to bring the nation together. He had met with Sarah Josepha Hale, editor of Godey's Lady's Book (and author of the famous nursery rhyme "Mary Had a Little Lamb") who had spent 40 years advocating for a national, annual Thanksgiving holiday. She convinced him that Thanksgiving was a way to infuse hope and belief in the nation and the constitution.

For 75 years, succeeding presidents honored Lincoln's tradition and issued a Thanksgiving Proclamation for the last Thursday in November. However, in 1939, the last Thursday of November was the 30th and retailers begged President Franklin D. Roosevelt to push Thanksgiving earlier to allow more time for Christmas shopping. President Roosevelt wanted to do all he could to help the economy during the Great Depression and declared Thanksgiving to be Thursday, November 23, the second-to-last Thursday of the month.

However, this caused confusion and many people disagreed with the decision. About half the country followed the new date while the other half recognized November 30 - the traditional date for Thanksgiving. Two states, Colorado and Texas, decided to honor both dates.

Afterwards, businesses reported that the spending was about the same no matter which date was celebrated, so Congress passed a law declaring that Thanksgiving would occur the fourth Thursday of November each year.

In modern times, the President of the United States, in addition to issuing a proclamation, will traditionally "pardón" a turkey, which spares the bird's life and ensures that it will spend the duration of its life roaming freely on farmland.
